This new $37.8 million ballpark is seen as the lynchpin of the continued revitalization of the downtown area. "Downtown Fayetteville is a much safer and cleaner place than in the past," Zarthar said. "As we planned, we looked at places like Durham, where a ballpark served as the anchor of a larger development downtown."

The Kannapolis Intimidators are planning to move into a new $52 million ballpark in 2020, part of a larger downtown redevelopment initiative. This state-of-the-art sports and entertainment “complex will be a catalyst for smart, sustained growth.” City Manager Mike Legg said. “The venue has already resulted in commitments by private investors for adjacent mixed-use developments valued at more than $100 million.”
